

Congress of the United States
House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515-2213

September 21, 2017

James M. Peck
President and Chief Executive Officer
TransUnion
555 West Adams Street
Chicago, Illinois 60661

Dear Mr. Peck:

We write to express our deep concern regarding the rights of hardworking Americans to their day in court in the wake of the Equifax data breach, one of the largest and potentially most damaging in history. The economic security of 143 million Americans has been jeopardized by this massive security failure. Making matters worse, many of those affected are unsure whether they even have legal recourse because of Equifax's initial use of forced arbitration clauses in its identity protection service. Although Equifax has revised its policy in response to public outcry, this limited change is simply not enough. Consumers across the country will likely turn to your credit monitoring and identity theft protection services because of this breach. Americans deserve to know that their legal rights are not undermined by doing business with TransUnion or because of a potential data breach at your company. We therefore request information concerning your plans to revise your terms of service and stance on the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's (CFPB) arbitration rule to restore consumers' day in court.

The Equifax data breach has shaken public confidence in the entire credit rating industry.<sup>1</sup> As you know, credit reporting agencies collect and store Americans' most sensitive data: Social Security numbers, driver's license numbers, dates of birth, and other forms of personally identifiable information. Once stolen, this data can be used by identity thieves for countless forms of fraudulent activity: opening fake bank accounts, filing fake tax returns, and other misconduct that has ruinous effects on the financial security of affected consumers. Until recently, Equifax's terms of service included a forced arbitration clause for all of its products and services.<sup>2</sup> But in the wake of widespread public alarm,<sup>3</sup> Equifax has revised its policy.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Farhad Manjoo, Seriously, Equifax? This Is a Breach No One Should Get Away With, N.Y. TIMES (Sept. 8, 2017), <https://nyti.ms/2xRTaSL>.

<sup>2</sup> Brian Fung, Equifax finally responds to swirling concerns over consumers' legal rights, Wash. Post (Sept. 10, 2017), https://www.washingtonpost.com/news/the-switch/wp/2017/09/08/what-to-know-before-you-check-equifaxs-data-breach-website/?utm\_term=.1c4b5f922335.

<sup>3</sup> Id.

<sup>4</sup> EQUIFAX, Terms of Use (last visited Sept. 15, 2017), <http://www.equifax.com/terms/>.

We are concerned about your company's use of forced arbitration in its terms of service, which include a forced arbitration clause and class action waiver. It states:

YOU UNDERSTAND AND AGREE THAT ANY DISPUTES BETWEEN YOU AND TRANSUNION INTERACTIVE, WILL BE RESOLVED THROUGH BINDING ARBITRATION. YOUR ORDER OF, ACCEPTANCE OF, USE OF, AND/OR ACCESS TO, THE PRODUCTS, RELATED WEBSITES AND CONTENT CONSTITUTE YOUR AGREEMENT TO ABIDE BY EACH OF THE TERMS SET FORTH HEREIN, INCLUDING THE ARBITRATION PROVISION.

YOU MUST ACCEPT THE TERMS OF THIS AGREEMENT BEFORE YOU WILL BE PERMITTED TO ENROLL IN, REGISTER FOR, PURCHASE OR USE THE PRODUCTS, SERVICES OR OTHER OFFERINGS.<sup>5</sup>

Americans are right to be outraged and frustrated by the use of forced arbitration in the terms of service of credit reporting agencies.<sup>6</sup> Forced arbitration clauses are a bald and predatory attempt to shield corporations from liability for their misconduct through the fine print of contracts. Americans unknowingly waive their legal rights and are forced into arbitration when disputes arise. In contrast to forced arbitration---a secretive, biased, and unfair---our courts are a guarantor of impartiality, fairness, and providing equal justice under the law for all Americans. The justice system is one of the few tools that everyday citizens have to fight deceitful and harmful business practices, vindicate their rights, and pursue justice.

In recognition of the importance of Americans' access to justice, the CFPB has finalized a rule to eliminate forced arbitration from consumer financial product contracts. This protection restores the rights of Americans to their day in court, and the transparency that comes with it, if their rights are violated by unscrupulous financial services and products. This new protection is vital for the economic security of the American people and our country's commitment to the rule of law. But rather than support this commonsense protection, your company and others like it have reportedly campaigned against it, spending millions in campaign contributions and other efforts to undermine both the rule and the CFPB.<sup>7</sup>

Now is the time to demonstrate your respect for the rights of your customers, not undermine them. Given these concerns, we ask whether you intend to revise your terms of service to protect Americans' access to justice by eliminating your company's use of forced arbitration and class action waivers. Furthermore, we ask whether you will end your opposition to the CFPB arbitration rule.

---

<sup>5</sup> TRANSUNION, Legal Information: Terms of Use (last visited Sept. 15, 2017), <https://membership.tui.transunion.com/tucm/support.page?panel=terms>.

<sup>6</sup> See, e.g., David Lazarus, The real outrage isn't Equifax's arbitration clause — it's all the others, L.A. Times (Sept. 12, 2017), <http://www.latimes.com/business/lazarus/la-fi-lazarus-equifax-arbitration-clauses-20170912-story.html>.

<sup>7</sup> Michael Hiltzik, Before its massive data breach, Equifax fought to kill a rule allowing victims to sue, L.A. TIMES (Sept. 11, 2017), <http://www.latimes.com/business/hiltzik/la-fi-hiltzik-equifax-arbitration-20170911-story.html>.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. We look forward to your response no later than October 15, 2017.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "David N. Cicilline", written over a horizontal line.

David N. Cicilline
Member of Congress

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Henry C. Hank Johnson, Jr.", written over a horizontal line.

Henry C. Hank Johnson, Jr.
Member of Congress

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "John Conyers Jr.", written over a horizontal line.

John Conyers, Jr.
Member of Congress

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Don Beyer", written over a horizontal line.

Don Beyer
Member of Congress